KERN "CHARLES THE BOLD."
Will be published early in December,
HISTORY OF CHARLES THE BOLD,
DUKE OF BURGUNDY.
By JOHN FOSTER KIRK.
Two Vols., 8vo., with Portraits.
"Mr. Kirk has done his work with an industry which the late William H. Prescott can well assess, for his materials appear to be all in the History of Charles the Bold, and the exhibition here the evidences of a thorough study of the subject, and a conscientious purpose to do full justice to the publication should be in all December."
The remarkable epoch treated by Mr. Kirk is full of great historical issues, and he has narrative on subject which is full of interest. The fall of the house of Burgundy is a memorable event in the history of civilization in the Middle Ages." It fairly followed, and the influence it breed both of the good and the ill that were the destinies of the principal European States."

FROM CHARLESTON.

DETAILS OF OPERATIONS IN CHARLESTON HARBOR.

Effects of the Firing on the City.

CAPTURE AND OCCUPATION OF SEABROOK ISLAND.

Rumor of an Expedition to Another Direction.

[Correspondence of the N. Y. Times.]

FORT PULASKI, S. C., November 17, 1863.

The more important events which have taken place in this Department for some time to be chronicled occurred on Seabrook Island. The rebels had erected batteries on the mainland, opposite Seabrook House, Rockwood House, and Legareville, and had a small force of rebel infantry, numbering about 400 men, stationed at the latter place. It was planned solely by a fearless and active officer, Lieutenant Colonel Hallowell, of the Fifty-fourth Massachusetts, and under his own command. Our men passed from Folly Island to Seabrook Island, a distance of about four miles, on the night of the 21st instant, the rebel field guns on James Island and a considerable force of infantry being within a few miles of the point of landing. The rebels, to the number of fifty-two, were captured in their beds at Legareville, and the whole force, consisting of about 400 men, was driven from the island in the afternoon. Four guns were captured, and a large quantity of rebel clothing and camp equipage.

General Schimmelfennig is a German soldier, of fine ability, and has been temporarily in charge of the corps of the Army of the Potomac. The engineers who have been engaged in the defences of Folly Island are officers of General Gillmore's New York regiment.

Whether anything more than can be expected from this movement, or whether or not it bears relation to any other movement, I am not informed, but the occupation of adjoining Charleston independent of water communication with the city, and the cutting off of the railroad communication, must have the effect of causing the rebels to retire much nearer fortifications to be constructed for the defence of the city, and to make it more difficult for them to send troops to carry out plans which may be formed with a view to operations against the city.

The Rebel Ram Fleet.

The rebel ram fleet, consisting of the Palmetto State, Chicora, Chicora, Raleigh, Charleston, and Columbia, is now lying at the wharves in the city, and has been for some time. The Columbia has been undergoing repairs for a long time, and is now ready for service. The Charleston is also undergoing repairs, and will be ready for service in a few days. The Raleigh is now ready for service, and has been for some time. The Palmetto State and Chicora are also ready for service. The Chicora has been undergoing repairs for some time, and will be ready for service in a few days. The Palmetto State is also undergoing repairs, and will be ready for service in a few days. The Columbia is also undergoing repairs, and will be ready for service in a few days. The Charleston is also undergoing repairs, and will be ready for service in a few days. THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1862.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

By proclamation of the President, and in accordance with the usage of the people of this great republic, the people of the States that are loyal and true to their country and its Government will, to-day, assemble in their respective places of worship to praise and give thanks to the great "Giver of every good and perfect gift" for the manifold blessings He has bestowed upon us as a people during the past year. They will blend with their grateful offering of praise the no less becoming duty of humiliation before Him. He may be pleased to lift from our beloved country His chastening hand, and deliver us from the scourge of civil war; that He will stay the plague of rebellion that has for so long a period over a fair section of the Union, and make the people of that section to smile in peace. And a people's supplications of the Most High God and sovereign Arbiter in the affairs of nations are always heard and answered. The Christian religion of the Divine angel, is joined a glad recognition of the goodness of God to a people who walk His judgments. Therefore let this day, with all appropriate solemnity, be observed as a day of worship send with songs of praise unto the Lord, for whom our fathers trusted and in whom we put our trust.

For, while we have cause of sorrow and humiliation, we have also cause for rejoicing unalloyed. Our country has been blessed with abundant harvests and our reasons for national gratitude are manifold. The enemies of the Union, as far as a people have experienced, we ought to be grateful to God, have not prevailed over us. The earth for us has not been cursed with barrenness. Our fields have not been made desolate scarcity through the land or even found a beginning in the country. Pestilence has not stricken down or made paralyzed. No foreign war has been forced upon us, nor has civil war reached the North. The fair fields of the loyal States he not wasted, and the Government has not been forced to call upon the people for an unusual draft to prosecute the war. Peace with the rebel hordes has the National flag been insulted, and the National honor has not been wantonly defeated; and foreign Powers have been restrained from taking advantage of our misfortunes. In any of these respects a reversal of the case would have been the result of our transgressions and in our exemption from such affliction we can recognize a Divine Providence ever so ready to bless the people who put their trust in Him and obey his thankfulness and gratitude.

We have also to thank the Almighty that have been bestowed upon us as a people by the "bountiful hand" of God, the means of prosperity, and public thanksgiving. For harvests abundant, for the health that has been given to the people of the country generally, and for the success of the exchequer, progress, and trade, we should be grateful to God. Our country is highly favored, and a population of which even the ravages of war cannot stay the increase, for a universal prosperity and happiness. We have been called upon to pass through the fiery ordeal of a revolution in support the Government in its efforts to suppress it, and we have the right of the Government to the record trust reposed in it by the people, and to the fact that the people of the territory permanently vested from the usurper's hand. We have established our position before the foreign powers, and the respect shown for our flag in the ports of the world is an evidence of our enlightenment and freedom; for education that is universal; for religious privileges above those of all nations; and for a liberty and freedom unparalleled; for ability to meet the demands of the war without resource to foreign aid. In the virility of heart shown in its prevention; and for a thousand other things for which the present occasion we may well and gladly bow before the Lord our God. We acknowledge Him to be the Lord.

The first duty having been performed, let the people maintain cheerfulness and joy throughout the day. Let them meet in their places of worship, and every committee with methods and means to make the day one of joy and gladness, into the spirit and customs of our New England ancestors. Let the day be one of thankful and blessings by naturally enjoying them. It is the duty of the people to be cheerful, and everything will be tempered by some and sad thoughts. Let the day be a day of gladness, and the usual sorrow should not sustain us from the observance of the duty. Let the social circle, home and public benefits, and the latter rather than the former should dwell in our memories and in the hearts of the people. Remember the poor, and the memories of the dead and the absence of the living from our midst should not make us only the more grateful that their patriotic deeds are to us and to our country a legacy of glory and that the beloved country from destruction and our hearth and home from desolation. Let us, all, and the grateful joy and the domestic and social blessings of the day, let not the widow and the fatherless, the poor and the sick, the afflicted, and especially the inmates of our military hospitals, be forgotten. Let the public and private children, on each occasion, upon them the Christian charity and the Christian duty of indigence and enjoyment. To them the people owe a debt which they will not forget, and which in peace and quietness of not wealth only but of the heart and affections they shall glad daily reciprocities of domestic and social life. Let the people of Washington do not need to be reminded of the duty of the day, and the afflicted, and especially the inmates of our military hospitals, are to be remembered by the public of the assassination and higher schools warrant governments in the future. Let the people of New York, and of the whole United States, remember that the cause of education is the cause of liberty, and that the one cannot be secured without the other. Let us, then, with one heart and all intelligence this morning, pledge ourselves, in 1866, to a more vigorous and successful support of our public schools, and to the establishment of such others as may be needed to secure to every child in our city and country the blessings of a good education.
